ABSTRACT: Med Resorts International was considering jumping onto the Internet with its own web page. In the first Internet brainstorming session, 8 key members of the management team along with the president of the company discussed internet applications that they had each seen and considered the problems related to online commerce and business applications. Before the session, each member of the group was assigned to gather information about personal World Wide Web and Internet use in order to discuss questions such as: What web sites had been visited? How had the Internet been of value?

SURE A WEBSITE SOUNDS LIKE A GREAT IDEA, BUT WHERE DO YOU BEGIN?

Like many others in small or midsize companies, we at Med Resorts International were considering jumping onto the Internet with our own Web page. Our managers were intrigued but realized that before staking out a site we needed a strategy.

In our first Internet brainstorming session, eight key members of our management team along with the president of the company discussed Internet applications we had each seen and considered the problems related to online commerce and business applications. We wanted to brainstorm ideas for possible applications for our business and determine our corporate culture toward doing business on the Internet.
